NATO Sees Vast Soviet Arms Drive

Warsaw Forces Have Superiority

By Drew Middleton

The Soviet Union according to authoritative Western military sources, is at "a flood tide" in a massive expansion of conventional and nuclear military strength.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird's disclosure yesterday of in-creases in Soviet nuclear strength confirmed NATO's belief that diswith the West have not affected Moscow's nuclear arms

Mr. Laird said that the Soviet Union was deploying new intercon-tinental ballistic missiles, including SS-9s, and that this program has been carried out while the Soviet Union and the United States have been discussing strategic arms imitations at Wenna.

Israelis Claim Three MiG-21s In Suez Battle

By Richard Eder

JERUSALEM, July 10 (NYT).-Israeli planes shot down three Egyptian MiG-21s this morning in a brief but intense dogfight over the Suez Canal, a military spokesman said here.

In Cairo, an Egyptian military spokesman said that Egyptian jet interceptors hit two Israeli warplanes near the canal today. All the Egyptian lighters returned safely to base from the air battle, in which about 24 planes took part, according to the Cairo spokesman. Earlier in the day, Cairo reported that 56 Israeli fighter-bombers had crossed the Suez Canal to attack Egyptian targets but were driven off by groundfire. The Jerusalem spokesman said that the dogfight which downed three MiGs took place during a lengthy series of air strikes by Israel all along the canal. The attacks were aimed at bunkers, army camps and artillery, according to the Israeli report.

No mention was made of Russian missile hatteries, which constitute Israel's most serious concern right now and which its air force has been attacking on and off during

SAM Countermeasures

Over the past few days, according to press reports here, "hun-dreds" of missiles from Sovietmade SAM batteries have been fired at the Israeli planes, with none of them finding their target.
This could suggest that the tactical patterns and other methods that the Israeli Air Force has been working on to neutralize the SAM-2s and 3s are beginning to show results.

Today's doglight was reported to have taken place in mid-morning over the northern sector of the canal. Two of the three Egyptian pilots were said to have bailed out. The Senate adopted that mes sure last week as part of a foreign military sales bill after seven weeks of debate over presidential powers to conduct the Asian war as he s fit. Far more than today's Tonkin vote, the evident anger of some senators at the cursory treatment of the Cooper-Church proposal by the "other body" reflected the Senate's growing maistance or a share in presidential policy

At breakfast with a group of re porters yesterday, Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield, D., Mont, warned that the Bouse's 237-153 defeat of the Cooper-Church measure could result in the collapse of the whole foreign arms sale program. The White House has scrively pushed early approval of the sales bill, which would author-ize military shipments fischeding jet planes for Israel to U.S. allies. But Sen. The American Indian's Future

To the several initiatives he has launched in domestic affairs. President Nixon has added a new Indian policy. He has done so with a candid statement to the general effect that the treatment accorded the American Indian is a historic chame and a present disgrace, and he has acknowledged the difficulty of redressing ancient wrongs by the very complexity of the solution he proposes.

The attitude of the United States toward the Indian tribes varied, in the early days, between treating them as sovereign entities and as the objects of genocide. In the later stages, the vaciliation was between the theory that the redman was a permanent ward of the state and one that would impose assimilation. Mr. Nixon rejects the paternalism of the ward system and the cultural waste of assimilation, Doubtless aware of the hostility engendered among the Canadian Indian hands by the Trudean government's announced plan to transfer them from federal to provincial supervision, President Nixon would have Congress explicitly disavow the intention of terminating the special relationship that exists between the Indians of the United States and Washington—an intention which has stood on the statute books since 1953. At the same time, he urges a large increase in Indian responsibility for programs within their own communities, including education. The President also recognizes that in many aspects of Indian affaira there is a conflict of interest within and among the federal agenciee: to solve that he would set up an Indian Trust Counsel Authority, to act ae a sort of ombudsman for the tribes. Finally, he proposes more money for Indian health. edocation and economic development.

This acceptance of the value of "cultural pluralism" as a national asset, this recog-future is determined by Indian acts and Indian decisions, is a sophisticated and statesmanlike approach. It will not meet the demand of many "Red Power" advocates, and its auccess depends on translating a complex philosophy into concrete acts. But in outline, and in many of its specific suggestions, it comes closer to meeting the needs of the Indian within the larger American community than any of its fore-

The great difficulty in adapting the Indian to his present environment (or vice versa) is not really racial antagonism. Far more than the black, the Indian has suffered almost ae much from stereotyped romanticism of the Chingachcook variety as from the harsher prejudices of the frontier. But his culture, his very identity, has depended on an economy that is either impossible to re-create (as in the case of nomad hunters) or which keeps the Indian at permanent poverty levels, such as the subsistence farming, eked out with hunting and fishing. which characterized the life of so many

To keep alive the symbols and the moral force of a culture when its economic reasons for being have disappeared has often been done over centuries of slow, transmutation of values. The Asian Indian sacred cow, for instance, may conserve comething of the old Aryan pastoral culture in entirely different circumstances. But the American Indian experience has been too abrupt for that: some tribes have shifted from foot-slogging. through a horse economy, to the pick-up truck in only a few hundred years. There is no certainty that the continued existence of a true Indian culture within the American pluralism is possible, under the hest of conditione. All that can be said is that Mr. Nixon is willing to give a good try at nition of the need to see that the Indian preserving one for the Indian future.

Toward a New Europe

Just about everybody in Europe sensee that Britain's application to join the sixnation Common Market is for real this time. For their two earlier failures, the Britishno more eager than anybody else to cope with the challenges of change-blamed the arbitrariness and perversity of Charles de Gaulle. The French president certainly deserved many of the slings and arrows cast his way but the British, with a decade's reflection behind them, are now more fully disposed to concede the obstacles they put in their own path.

Economically, they have come to realize, they cannot at once enjoy untrammeled access to the large and growing European market and at the same time take advantage of preferential food imports from Commonwealth countries and spare British factories and unions the hard adjustments they will have to make for British goods to be competitive in Europe. Politically, they cannot hold on to the benefits in prestige and defense of a "special relationship" with the United States and also assume the obligations flowing from membership in a developing political "confederation" in Western Europe. These are the real issues for Britain, however overlaid they customarily are by seemingly exotic considerations of community financing, common agricultural policy and the like.

Their net effect is to compel a fundamental realignment of what it is to be an Englishman: no longer a resident of a tight little island secure in fts unique traditions and assured prospects, but part of a larger and more complex and more uncertain entity-a Europe in which Britain will lose the measure of control over its sovereign policies that first its power and then its association with the United States allowed It in the past. For all its diverting air of a sports contest (will it join the market or won't it?), this is a grave moment for Britain. Its resiliency and courage and willingness to step out onto new paths are again on display, and in demand.

In a year or two, the negotiations for British entry will have been completed-successfully, most of the experts believe. Ireland. Denmark and Norway are also applying at this time; their applications are, relatively speaking, a snap. In a few years

Best Choice for Labor

Roy Jenkins was the best possible choice for deputy leader of the British Labor party. His election by an overwhelming margin not only augurs well for the future of a party recovering from unexpected election defeat; it is good news on a crucial issue for Prime Minister Heath's Conservative government.

Mr. Jenkins is the foremost "European" in the parliamentary Labor party and the election of deputy leader was waged mostly on the issue of British membership in the Common Market. Every doctrinaire leftwinger, every "Little Englander," every Labor member (there are some) still nostalgic for empire and euphoric over the Commonwealth, opposed Mr. Jenkins.

The fact that he had twice the vote of his nearest rival, Michael Foot, indicates greater strength for the "European" idea in Labor's ranks than anyone had anticipated. It should mean that Mr. Heath can count on support from a substantial Labor majorlty for any reasonable terms for joining the European community.

Apart from his pro-European stand, Mr. Jenkins has been one of the ablest ministers in any British government of recent years. As home eecretary, he proved himself a courageous social reformer. As chancellor of the exchequer, he turned an ailing economy around and delivered a record balance-of-payments surplus of $1.4 billion for 1989. He can be of immense assistance to Harold Wilson in providing the responsible and constructive opposition that makes parliamentary democracy work.

fenders. But Secretary of State William Rogers has just been talking to the dominoes in the course of an Asian tour.

In country after country he has cootinue as protector of the Pacific. No one government has even met him halfway. And if his trip has succeeded in anything, it has been in exposing the Domino Theory once and for all as a pernicious self-delusion.

Consider first the case of South Vietnam. The secretary's hope was to get some sign of support from President Nguyen Van Thieu for President Nixon's new emphasis on a negotiated settlement of the war. But the Thieu government uttered no public word in support of negotiations. Privately. Gen. Thieu's aides put it about that their president had given Mr. Rogers the wet mitten when he broached the subject of new peace initiatives.

More Aid

Indeed, far from obliging the secretary, the Thieu government used the occasion of his visit to leck up American aid commitments to South Vietnam. The United States has agreed to increase aid to Saigon by another $100 million, with special provision for supplying more food and more housing to South Vietnamese troops. And anybody who knows enything about Vletnam knows that no small part of those funds will be going into the pockets of the generals who rule the country.

Then there is the case of Thailand. That country sits cheek-byjowl with Cambodia; it is a member of the South East Asia Treaty Organization, and it has received billions in American military ald over the past two detades. So there was some responsibility to meet Secretary Rogers's plea for Thei military ection to support the beleaguered Cambodian regime against Communist assault.

But when the call came, the Thais developed a tin ear. Their forces were required to meet local Communist insurgents-not mention trouble expected as result of a large hike in food and to form others emong Thais of Cambodian extraction. But that, of course, would require more money from the United agreed to a year's limitation, but switch Pentagon dollars to dothe talks broke down when the United States insisted on a longterm understanding.

In his Tokyo visit, Secretary Rogers reached agreement with Prime Minister Elsaku Sato on the principle that the trade talks should not get in the way of larger relations between Japan and the United States. That amounts to giving the case away on textiles. In effect, having asked Tokyo for concessions and been refused. Washington is now saying, "Let's kiss end make up."

The pattern that emerges from these encouoters is not one of Asian countries concerned about an external danger to the point of making accommodations for the protecting power of the United States, On the contrary, the Asian countries involved are looking after their own interests in the narrowest sense. Instead of making special efforts to heip the United States shoulder the defense burden. they use each occasion to screw more out of Washington in the way of money and diplomatic concessions.

They can do this because, in fact, the Domino Theory is all wrong. The beleaguered countries of Southeast Asia are not hard objects that push one against the other es in a row of dominoes They are much more like swamps. They are soft and porous. They have a greet capacity, as this country and the French and Japanese have found out, for absorb-ing a foreign presence without going under. Left to themselvee witbout foreign protection against the Communists, they would probably decompose into mall pockets of rival tribal areas.

Of course, the true purpose of the Domino Theory was not to describe the situation in Asia but to rationalize the Vietnamese war for American public opinion. The idea was that the American presence could be justified as a kind of proxy action on behalf of the apanese, the Thais, the Malavsians and Indonesians. It was a case of trying to mitigate our own guilt by implicating others. The others, naturally, demand a price for easing the Anerican conscience. That is why Secretary

Rogers on his recent rounds found not offere of help but demands for more assistance. And the fact is that it will be impossible for this country to deal straight with the States. Asians as long as American of-Lestly, there's the case of Japan. ficials continue to delude them-doctrine as the administration's realistic way of remaining committed to the rest, of the world by laying a basis for a continuing practical relationship (read for "practical" a "lesser" relationship) but not a basis for total withdrawal.

As the same brister said, stating a doctrine is a lot easier than implementing it. Nobody knows that better than Laird

"Vietnamization" is the Vietnam version of the Nixon Doctrineturn the war over to the locals. In South Korea, it means pulling one of the two U.S. divisions. In NATO it means some cuts after mid-1971 and some big cuts if the Western Europeans don't come up-by next December's NATO ministerial meeting with a lot of new money to pay for the American

Laird has been cutting the size of the Army as troop levels go mestic needs. A 2.6 million man force in 1965 cost $13.9 billion in pay alone; in the current fiscal year the same number costs $29 billion. That's before you figure of weapon at the encroaching Japathe cost of outfitting and arming nese Air Fleet, before all hell broke a man

No wonder Laird said he hopes for a strategic arms limitation (SALT) agreement with the Soviet Union. The cost of further escaleting the arms race, in the ebsence of an agreement, would be astronomical. Fortunately the Kremlin hes ruble problems just as we have dollar problems.

The Four Realities

Inexorably, then, American military manpower and the American presence eround the world is going down. . What Laird calls "the four realities" make it so: The strategic reality, hopefully to be mitigated by a SALT agree-ment; the fiscal reality, the smaller share the Pentagon gets of the total budget; the manpower reality, the absolute necessity to cut the armed forces; the political reality, Congress's determination for one reason or another to end the Pentagon's golden years in the Treasury vault.

The Nixon Doctrine, as a sort rationale for lowering the American posture but avoiding a total withdrawal into a new form of isolationism, includes a program for beefing up local for with American help. But, as Laird amented in the case of Korea, these dollars are harder and harder to come by from a reluctant Congress. "If we are going to remove Amercan ground forces from the Asian he said (and he could have added some other places, too), "it is necessary for us to increase in a substantial way the military assistance program." That includes straight U.S. dollar aid for arms and the right to sell American arms abroad Both of these aspects also are under congressional attack from budget cutters and from those who want to end the "merchant of death" sales business.

The NATO problem is different from Vietnam and Korea but no less intractable. Here Laird is insisting not on more off-set pay-ments in the McNamara fashion but on budget support. The European defense ministers at their September meeting had better come up with more money or major American troop be inescapable.

"The castic was floodlit," Rossi recalls, "and from my lawn we had this old stone fortress leaning right over us. Arp was impressed. He saw its possibilities as a setting for abstract form. Mrs. Arp is herself Swiss, and Jean Arp, who was born in Strasbourg, took Swiss citizenship after wandering through Europe. Locarno, built on the shore of a lake with mountains and valleys behind it, has always attracted artists. Ben Nicholson secludes himself on an island off the coast, Hans Richter has an atelier adjoining Remo Rossi's. Paul Klee died in Locarno in the summer of 1940.

Because of Rossi'e hard work, financial and moral support from Locarno and encouragement from Jean Arp's widow. the museum has been realized.

A Hundred Underground Works of Emil Nolde

By Max Wykes-Joyce I ONDON, July 10.—In August, 1941, the German painter Emil Nolde was forbidden by the Nam government "to underiake any professional or related activity within the field of the visual arts."

This total han on painting was the last and worst in a edience of harasaments which had begun in 1938. He defied ban painting hundreds of tiny watercolors on scraps of Japan paper, anything larger being difficult to conceal, proper materials being forbidden him. and the smell of oil likely to betray his activity to the Ges-

A selection of more than one hundred of these forbidden paintings is now on view, at the Marlborough Fine Art Gallery, 39 Old Bond Street, which is an exhibition of wonder and enchantment. The circumstances of their production are irrelevant; as works of art they are magnificent Nolde's cense of color was acute to the last degree; and his sense of composition equally so. So that in the tiny "Danc-ing Couple" even the torn edge of the paper is colored in such rhythm of the dance. The dreaming head of the "Young counteract the uneven beveling of the paper to the right.

Another great colorist was Bonnard, and 19 of his small paintings are on show at Victor Waddington, 25 Cork St. All are from the Bonnard estate and few have been shown in public, so that one has an opportunity to make a fresh assessment. It clearly emerges from this show that he has been underestimated as painter of landscape. The immensity of space so brilliantly 1895; the marvelous sense of light, like that of Bonington, in the "Deux Arbres Verts" of the same year; the architectonics of "Paysage l'Allée" and "Bord de Mer, Arcachon," both of 1925, all lead to the conclusion that Bonnard was in the mainstream of French landscape

Color, light and motion all unite in two exhibitions entitlward Gallery and the London Arts Gallery. The catalog of the Arts Council exhibition of work of the three artists who form the group is prefac-ed with a definition of the word continuum: a contipuous series of component parts passing into one another; for example, the three space dimensions are considered to form a four-dimensional continuum. The three artists are the Irish-

American-educated 630 Janz, the American-born, En glish-educated Dante Leonelli and the Australian-born, English-educated Michael McKin. non who all worked together at the Plastics Research United the Royal College of Art in

To make these light and mo tion sculptures they use me newly perfected materials and complex lighting systems which necessitate close cooperation he tween the group and industry. Leonelli, the coordinator for the group, states: "We treat dealing with industry as we would a business deal. That is, since we are working towards an architectural context for our work, what we offer to dustry is more than a public platform-we are extending the possibilities for the use of their bulk materials. As is clear in the more intimate of the group's exhibitions at London Arts Incorporated, 22 New Bond Street, although each of the three works very closely in conjunction with the others, the final decision about any given piece is an individual The situation is as with members of a musical group, the amount of interdependence is fluid." These I would rate as the most exciting exhibitions currently to be seen in a London fairly full of excitements.

Art Market: Chinese Archaic Bronzes

By Souren Melikian

I ONDON, July 10.—The most important sale of Chinese archaic bronzes and early pottery this year in London or Paris will be held Tuesday at Sotheby's. It will offer an extremely good selection in these two highly desirable categories of art. The first part of the sale-70 lots-is made up of objects from the Denis Cohen collection, now the property of Mary Sotheby's experts have been careful to draw a distinction between this part of the sale, for which a separate catalogue was printed, and the second part. They were right; the Cohen collection well known to specialists and connoissenrs and objects from a private collection always have greater appeal than those which are sold by dealers at auction.

Scholarly Book

Some of the major srchale bronzes are coming up for sale for the first time since they were studied and illustrated in a scholarly book, "Archaic Chinese Bronzes," a definitive work on the subject by William Watson, published by Faber and Faber in 1962. An object which has not only been published in an art book of the coffee-table variety but has been studied scientifically in detail acquires more value than it had before, all other things

The first of these recently published items is an impressive ritual bronze wine vessel, called hu in Chinese, of the early Middle Chou period. It dates from the 9th century.

It is 17.7/8 inches high and 11.1/2 inches wide and its molded wavy pattern gives it the kind of powerful rhythm which characterizes the Chou period as opposed to the earlier Shang types.

This partly atoms for the comparative coarseness of the molded motifs and unmistakable vulgarity of much of Middle Chou art.

Whatever its artistic merits however, it is of considerable historic interest. A long dedication inscribed inside the neck records that it was made for a state official. In the inscription is included a phrase which is in part the basis for the exact dating of the object. As Watson points out, at all times from Shang to the end of Chou, inscribed vessels are a minority.

The next important bronse, lot 47, is an earlier archaic wine vessel of the type called ku. It has the usual flared trumpet neck cast with four cleads blades and the hollow splayed foot decorated with masks (so-called fac-tich). Inside the foot is a pictogram which has not been deciphered like so many others of the same

هكذامن (لاجر

Like the Chou hu, the ku is illustrated by Watson, who dates it from the 12th-11th century BC. Sotheby's expert, apparently on the conservative side, has given it the looser dating of "Shang," that is, 14th-11th century BC. By rare coincidence, the companion vessel-with the same pictogram inside the hollow foot-is included in the sale under No. 48. It is tainted by a small flaw in the neck but the buyer of No. 47 would be wise to buy this one to keep the genuine pair-so rerely preserved in ancient Chinese art_together.

Previous Prices

The prices these three pieces will fetch will be particularly interesting because pieces of similar type have been sold recent ly. On Dec. 10, 1968, a superb ku was knocked down at $88,000 at Sotbeby's. Its magnificent decoration and patina made it definitely out of the ordinary and superior to these. Last February, another run-of-the-mill ku sold for $7,700, also at Sotheby's. The one which is in good condition to be sold next Tuesday should not go for less than $7,000. If the market is not too shaky, it might well feich more—say $10-$12,000.

The last of the more remarkable bronzes is a ritual food vessel, so called kuet, again with an important inscription discussed by Watson, who also illustrates the object. The wording, Watson writes, suggests a period of transition between Shang and Chon. He dates the vessel at the end of the 11th century BC. In terms of beauty, it leaves the other three far behind.

Ideal Test

Considering the quality of these pieces and the written evidence they offer for dating them, they provide the ideal test of the present state of the art market in the top range of archaeological works.

Chinese artistic patrimony have long been stopped and, therefore, such bronzes rarely come out of China. We are dealing here with a closed market—the number of items for sale can only decrease—which is an incentive to buyers. If these bronzes fall to fetch good prices, then the art market as a whole would appear to be

In America. A Reconsideration of Black Art

By Emily Genauer

JEW YORK -- Except that black artists create it, I wrote last year in reviewing one of the increasing number of what were being called "black shows," I don't know what black art is. A number of well-known black artists, among them painter Jacob Lewrence and sculptor Richard Hunt, were expressing similar

The term carries no historical meaning, unless it's used which it isn't to refer to African primitive art. Nor does it carry stylistic meaning as, for instance, Chi-nese art does, or African Congo sculpture. Black artists work in many styles. Their avant-garde phstractions tell no more about their color or their life experience as American blacks than do the traditional landscapes and portraits made by those sophisticated, highly esteemed ward Bannister or Henry Tanper; a member of the National Academy.

When black artists do draw on and project their experi-ences, observations and passions, the proper name for their work is social realism, or protest art, or expressionism, or just prop-aganda, depending on its quality. Sympathetic white artists using black themes (like Philip Evergood) are also social real-

Therefore, no double standards, please. Art is art, whether blacks, women, Jews or any-body else makes it.

Special Look

Only now I've changed my mind. Or, maybe, black art itself now exists in ways it didn't before. Some of it has developed a special look, Some of it takes on its identity from its setting and purpose. But that it does exist is what emerges with great force from what's shaping up as the country's most controversial art exhibition this year, the Boston

COLOGNE, July 10 (AP).-A Cologne civic museum has paid 950,000 marks ($259,562) for Max Ernst's early surrealistic painting "Au Rendez-yous des Arms" ("Rendezvous of Friends").

It is one of the highest prices ever paid for a work by the German-born artist who once worked in Cologne and now lives in France. Ernst is 79.

The 40-by-75-inch painting was purchased by the Wallraf Richartz Museum from a private collector in Hamburg. Museum director Dr. Horst Keller calls it "the Nightwatch of the 20th century," comparing it to the 17th-century painting by Rem-

And, ironically, now that black art has declared and identified itself so powerfully, some signs indicate that the tide of black shows will sub-

On the simplest and most obvious level is the physical look of some new works by black artists. A growing group of them, calling themselves neo-Africanists, is attempting to extract from African primitive sculpture stylistic characteristics that they incorporate into their own work.

This isn't to be confused with the borrowings from African primitive art made by cubists such as Picasso about 60 years ago. They sought to give their work more intense formal expressiveness by using the extreme simplifications they observed in African masks and

The neo-Africanists aren't looking for new forms for the sake of form itself, or even for heightened emotional impact. They're searching for deeper, profounder meanings having to do with racial memory and identification. They hope to find them through the adapta-tion into their own expressions of design motifs, patterns, colors and shapes they find in African

More Significant

Operating on a more significant level are the artists whose works, the best in the Boston show, are informed by a burn ing commitment to the black community. This isn't simply a matter of black theme or didactic approach. That would be the old social realism, or message art, where the artist, not basically concerned with form, summons the best skills he can command to make a strong statement.

In the new development of social realism the message simply can't be told in traditional forms, because they're part of an outworn system belonging to and symbolizing a past that must be discarded. So the artists are working in new techniques, including collage, shaped canvases and three-dimensional painting. With these they can communicate specific social ideas that can't, in fact, be separated from new sesthetic ideas, because both are part of the same new world.

The best example of this new form of social realism in the Boston show is Benny Andrews's "The Champion," a powerful painting of a black fighter whose battered face is a threedimensional aculotural collage leaping out of the canvas, as the real ropes that establish the corner of the ring where he sits, but just as surely more candid about the matter. Black shows, he says, "precipi-tate henefits" for black artists. Blacks' Problems This is justification enough

But there's still another kind of black art in Boston whose identity derives clearly and pragmatically from its purpose.

It may be a distinction of dubious validity, but in view of the way it's worked out, I accept it.

Edmond B. Gaither, curstor of the National Center of Afro-

American Artists, who assem-bled the exhibition, couldn't be for the great wave of black shows in recent years, held when there seemed no clear reason for them. Most weren't very good (as if white exhibitions have been all that good), The works included weren't sufficiently unlike what was being shown everywhere to make a special point. Most of us watching the art world closely felt there had been no sharp dis-crimination against black artista. Their problems, of finding themselves as artists and then of finding a place where their works could be shown, are those of white artists and not a bit tougher.

Nevertheless, Gaither says, precisely as a result of the wave of black shows, the situation for black artists has immeasurably improved. Both the white and black communities are now aware of them. Black artists are winning teaching posts in universities. Their works are being bought by college

But the irony is that a reaction is setting in, not among whites but among blacks, apparently fed up with being hyphensted. Some black artists are saying they want once again to be known just as artists. Gatther, admitting this, says that the Boston show may possibly be the last big black exhibition

What a paradox if "black" existence sprang from the fact that the social dynamics of our time demand drastic programs, should also bring about its own end as a separate expression.

Students: If you dig Europe, wait until you get to Israel.

Israel is not like Europe. It's not like the U.S.A. It's really something else.

When you see Israel our way, you take a trip behind, the headlines. You get into what's really happening and meet people who are making it happen.

And you do it for $3 a day (meals and transportation included) if you're a college student. We have four different trips to take you from front-line kibbutzim to villages built on Biblical dreams . . . to introduce you to government leaders, military spokesmen and people who will rap with you about the way it really is. Each trip leaves on a different day of the week and we are running them every week beginning Sunday, June 28th. No matter how you are getting to Israel, look us up when you arrive. Greater future income can be the goal of a $5,000 portfolio placed under management now

If the money you have today is to grow in the future toward more income, or for education, travel. leisure, retirement, it must be kept working full time to achieve your goals.

tu inflation, taxes or lack of time for investment decisions.

To belp solve this problem, clients in 55 countries have turned to The Danforth Associates Investment Management Plan. It has, we believe, proved especially efficient in providing continuing capital growth supervision for portfolios of from $5,000 to $50,000 on behalf of people who recognize and can share the risks and rewards of common stock investments. The cost is modest, as low as $100 per year.

For a complimentary copy of a 42-page report describing this tested plan, its complete 10-year "performance record," and how it may help you now, simply write Dept. M-29.

President Nixon 'Deeply Worried' On Quota Issue

WASHINGTON, July 10 (Renters) .- President Nixon has told Rep. Wilbur Mills, D., Ark, and Rep. John Byrnes, R., Wis., that he is deeply concerned over the possibility that the House Ways and Means Committee might approve a comprehensive quota proposal, rather than a textile footwear import cutting measure congressional and trade industry sources said today.

Rep. Mills, chairman of the committee, and Rep. Byrnes, its ranking Republican, confirmed they met Mr. Nixon at the White House last night at the President's request but reinsed further comment to reporters.

An industry source said Mr. Nixon feared that an all-out trade war could be triggered by an omnibus bill, with damaging results for U.S. foreign

Romania Balks at Loss Of Unanimity Principle

MOSCOW, July 10 (AP) -Seven Communist countries signed an agreement today to set up a hard currency investment bank headquartered here. Romania was not among them. The official Soviet news agency Tass announced the agreement signed by the Soviet Union, Bulgaria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Mongolia and Poland. All are members of the communist common market known as Comecon.

Romania, the only Comecon member not signing, had refused participation during the 24th Comecon council in May.

The Soviet Union is expected to ontinue pressuring independentminded Bucharest to join the bank, which Tass said would have "an authorized capital of 1 billion transferrable rubles" or roughly $1.11 billion at official rates. Tass reported that Romania has promised to study the possibili-

..... Country

The report of the Banque de France eparation for fiscal year 1989 has just be presented by the Governor to the President of the French Republic.

In the first pert, this document reviews the financial and monetary evolution during that year, and analyses the action undertaken by the Sauk in view of regulating the strength of a first that controlling the strength of arealis to the economic sector. The persistence of inflationary tendencies, which become visible during the Sprit of 1968, has readjeed unavoldable a more energetic action on the part of public or monetary authorities to slow down payment to allities, encourage savings and rejustate the equilibrium of payment with foreign countries. The deficit of the balance with foreign countries, lempararily covered by various blatteral assistance and subsequently by drawings on the International Monetary Fund, began to decline offer the develoption of the franc decided in August.

The rehabilitation of the financial simution and the reinforcement of the credit policy finally put the French economy on the way of recovery. The expansion of liquid maney slowed down ovaliable imais have not so to say shown ony increase between the beginning and the end of the year.

The second part of the report outlines the activities of the Earls by analyzing the sychation of the mark liques of its belience wheel. Motoworthy inch-banknotes in circulation of the end of the year remained at the same level on an December 31, 1988. The official gold and fareign currency reserves have decreased, even though the deficit of payments had essentially been covered through foreign financing and the balance of payments had been on the whole less uninvolvable than the results registered during the seven months that preceded the devaluation.

registered during the seven ments that preceded the devaluation.

Financial aid to the State shows a downward trend as a consequence of the reduction of Treasury charges. Financial sid to banks progressed slower than in 1880; however, the largesse has been quite considerable, since in the bottome sheet this item has to balance the effects of the deficit of payments with foreign countries and the decrease of credits to the Treasury.

In conclusion, the report reviews the situation of the Franch economy and its financial position in the Spring of 1870. The measures taken it 1869 and extended at the heginning of the following year, to carb the expansion of credits have had positive results; they contributed in particular to the return to an equilibrium between demand and production and to the improvement of communical exchanges with foreign countries. Substantial entries of foreign currences have allowed not only the complete reimbursement of short-term foreign advances and of foreign currency which French banks are chilesed to deposit with the Europe de France, according to existing regularitions, but also to increase the gross currency holdings. The French bonder continues, however, to present certain characteristics of on inflationary tendency which prevailed in the country for so long. The production capacity remains insufficient in certain sectors of the industry and in particular the rise in prices is too rapid. Although it was possible to render the credit controls more flexible the current situation commands the maintenance of a prudent monetary policy and does not permit to relinquish the existing regulations in regard to financial cid to honks.

To the difficulties resulting from the current conjuncture should be added certain to insensial sid to bender.

To the difficulties resulting from the current conjuncture should be added certain continuing structural weaknesses. Savings remain insufficient to cover investment needs and the control of the increase of loans granted to the Franch economy is remisted somewhat difficult by the belief the banks seem still to have, by virtue of loan-prevailing insultion, that they will always get the necessary financial old from the Banque de France. It is thus imperative to develop savings and force the banking system in France, the principal supplier of money available through credits, to assume its responsibilities. On that condition only will France he chie to finance its expansion without making, as was often the case in the past, excessive demand on mency supply.

TWO SISTERS

A Memoir in the Form of a Novel By Gore Vidal. Little, Brown. 256 pp. $5.95 Reviewed by Joseph Epstein GORE Videl is the funniest writer in America. He is the closest we come to having a swriter like Malcolm Muggeridge and, indeed, in several regards he surpasses Mug-geridge. Behind his humor is a comic vision that looks across America and sees a forest of cultural absurdity, intellectual madness, and social chaos. Within this forest, he has become our leading hatchet man and what a nice touch it is that a man whose hatchet has become so bloodied over the years should be named Gore.

Gossip is at the very heart of "Two Sisters." We are deal-ing here with a tale of incest, a book whose author's aims in composition are relatively simple: to be irreverent, to be outrageous, to be charming. It is, as they say, Vidal's schtick, is, as they say, vital's schild, and, being a professional entertainer of considerable mastery, he brings it off handsomely. "Two Sisters" does for the subject of gossip what Philip Roth did for the subject of onenism it closes the door to all further excursions into the field.

Consider the literary strategy behind "Two Sisters," which is really an invitation to consider the book's sub-title: "A Memoir in the Form of a Novel" As a wakeful watchman over the current literary scene, Vidal well knows that the novel has lost much of the impact it once had; the so-called real world has taken on too much of the quality of fiction-bad fiction, it is true—for fiction itself to count for much these days. For fiction to cause excitement these days, it must be either outra-geous ("Portnoy's Complaint") or truly consummate ("Mr. Sammler's Planet"). Although he made a good deal of noise with "Myra Breckinridge," his other recent novels, "Washother recent novels, "Wash-ington, D.C." and "Julian," while evidently bringing in ample rewards in coin, seem critically to have sunk without trace. In the final analysis, as the Romanian pessimist E.M.-Cloran has said, "we all want to be praised. Short of that, we'll settle for being talked about,

"Two Sisters," his memoir in the form of a novel, ought to keep the wolf of insignificance from Gore Vidal's door for months. It is a book of three parts, all somewhat interlarded. It contains a story (a fiction) about Vidal's love affair with a beautiful set of twins, Eric and Erika Van Damm, a screenplay and note-book, which Eric, who is dead at the time of the narration, has left behind; and Vidal's own vast digressions on contemporary life and letters. As narrator, Vidal appears in name of the man telling the story is Gore Vidal—and both he and his fictional characters comment freely on such live persons as Tennessee Williams and Viadimir Nabokov. In order of simple enjoyment—and this is a book that offers a great number of enjoyments, not all of them simple—the discursions into gossip about his contemporaries are the most amusing.

The more strictly-fictional line of the book comes next; and last is the scenario written by the dead. Eric, though this, oddly shough is meant to be most scandalous of all.

The gossip really is rich stuff It comes in the form of minessays written from Vidal's particular points of veiw, which are hedonistic, homosexual, and insofar as this is possible, with. out illusion. The element of malice is more often present than not.

The fictional segment of the book, which features Vital's affair with Erika (consumnation ed) and her twin brother Erie (unconsummated), is very art fully done. Although the twins do not come across too well, the auxiliary characters are nothing short of dazzling. The most careful creation in the book the one on whom the nicest touches and strokes are lavished is a character named Gore Vidal a highly civilized bisexual who says only witty things.

Now what ought to be the juiciest, what is obviously intended to be the most scandalous, and what really should be the beauty part of "Two Sisters" never really comes of This is the scenario that Eric Damm leaves behind which is reprinted in full in the middle of the book. It is about two adventuresses in the ancient world, one of whom, Helens, is the widow of a much beloved emperor. She makes a great to-do about her mourning and finally decides to marry the richest merchant in the world, a man who lives more grandly than any emperor. A dirty mind, as Vidal well knows never sleeps, and it would require an exceedingly innocent one not to make the connection between the construct of his scenario and the career of Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis.

Very well, but there is a complicating factor in the scenario, and this is that Helena has been sleeping with her brother, Herostratus. This has reference to the Van Damm twins, who have also committed incest in the book, but this fact dissolves as nothing next to another posibility. A genealogical item flashes upon the screen of the dirty mind to remind one that Mrs. Onassis and Gore Vida have shared a stepfather. Vidal himself reminds us of this fragile connection, but the truly dirty-minded have dined for weeks on less substantial fare, The scenario, certainly, builds up the strength of this possibility even more, for in it Herostratus achieves his fame by setting fire to the elaborate tomb that Helena has built for her dead husband—just as Goe Vidal has achieved a considerable notoriety by blasting in article after article the Kennedy image that Mrs Onassis has worked so hard to achieve over

What's going on here? The American people, or at least that dirty-minded portion of us demands to know. For the novel scandal, like the pornographic novel, labors under a finally unsolvable problem-its readers can never get enough Strange that an old scandalmonger like Gore Vidal would forget that.

Well, it rertainly seems that way. Let's say Casey presided as a midwife of sorts at the birth of the Mets, then nurtured this puniest off-spring through the harrowing underprivileged years and finally stepped aside to watch this creature of his imagination become champion of the world, The Mets produce their an-

Aparicio Is AL Shortstop; Powell Gets the Most Votes

NEW YORK, July 10 (AP).-Luis Aparicio of the Chicago White Sox nosed out Rico Petrocelli of the Boston Red Sox for the starting shortstop job on the American League All-Star team and Davey Johnson of Baltimore was named to replace the injured winner at second base, Rod Carew of Minnesota.

Basebell commissioner Bowle Kuhn announced the results of the fan vote of: 2,034,734 ballots and the starting lineup that will face the National League July 14 in the All-Star Game at Cincinnati's new Riverfront Stadium.

Boog Powell, Baltimore first baseman, led the league with 1,007,930 votes, but fell short of the 1,394,847 polled by Bank Asron, Atlanta's superstar outfielder, in the National League. Carew, who recently underwent knee surgery, won the second base starting job by a margin of about 678,000 votes. However, Carew will not be able to play. Commissioner Kuhn announced his place will be taken by Johnson, the choice of manager Earl Weaver of the Orioles, who will boss the A.L. team. Cambodian operation?"

"Oh no. We have nothing to be bitter about. The Americans announced they were coming into our country only to save American lives, The South Victnamese announced they had invaded us to save South Vietnamese lives. The North Vietnamese are obviously here to save North Vietnamese lives. One caonot quarrel with an army that invades your country to save their own lives."

"Nevertheless, it still must be hard on the Cambodians to have so many foreign people in their country."

"We would be inhospitable hosts to menlion it. The important thing is the domino theory. If Indochina falls we would be rery upset."

"I notice all the plantations around here have been de-stroyed. What will your people

"We will find something to do. The destruction of the plantations and the economy is a small price to pay for the freedom we now have in our coun-fry."

"You are very inscrutable." "It is very important for a small nation to repress its own desires in the world scheme of things. Whatever has happened in our country is nothing compared to what we have done for the moralc of the South Vietnamese Army. When we see them march through our streets with their cliests sticking out and their heads held high we can only rejoice that the South Vletnamese soldiers have finally tasted victory."

"Were you sorry to see the Americans go?"

"One is always sorry to see Americans go, but we still hear from them through the air and through their artillery. It is not as if they've said good-bye."

"Mr. Dan Tan it seems to me that if Cambodia had not become a sanctuary for fire Communists von would not have had to get involved in the un-

"Yes, one cannot blame other people when one becomes a sanctuary. Of course, North Vietnam is a sancluary and no one thinks of going there, and Red China is a sanctuary but no one thinks of wiping It out. You must be very small and belpless before anyone considers you a sanctuary worth destroying."

"Well, I'm glad you have no hurt feelings, Mr. Dan Tan. "You may tell your readers I am very pleased with the entire operation, as pleased as President Nixon, and as soon as I get my house rebuilt he is welcome in my bome."

After 50 Years and 100 Set Designs

PARIS.-In a career of nearly 50 years, Boris Aronson has designed the sets. and sometimes the costumes, for over 100 stage productions ranging from the Peter Hall-Laurence Olivier "Coriolanus" to "Fiddler on the Roof," which is now playing in 18 countries, often with the Aronson designs. "Sometimes they buy them," he says, "sometimes they steal them."

Mr. Aronson, a Russian-born New Yorker, is on his way to London to think about the next Hal Prince-Stephen Sondheim Broadway musical. He dio "Zorba" and "Cabaret" for Prince and this season designed the sets for the new Prince-Sondheim hit, "Company."

"I am bappler with 'Company' than with anything." he says. A new depar-ture in musicals, it was also a new departure for Mr. Aronson, who used a lot of steel. plexiglass and projections.
"Company" is about married life in New York. It's not for or against, it just shows that marriage cannot be as it was in other centuries because you are living in little boxes which are all transparent. I're lived in New York 50 years and I always felt it was virgin territory. I was elated to do the show,"

The son of a rabbi and the only one of ten children to go into the theater. Boris Aronson is a scholarly looking man with a nice, sudden twinkle who dresses in shades of gray, even to the frames of his eyeglasses. In Russia he worked with designers who opposed naturalism in the theater, and in New York his first employment was with the Yiddish Art Theater in the Bronx which he describes as the Jewish off-Broadway. "My early work in the Ylddish theater of New York was much more Russian than American." he says. "Most of the plays took place in heaven or hell, not New York."

From the Bronx he went straight into sophisticated Broadway revue when Robert Benchley unexpectedly got him the job of designing "Walk a Little Faster," which featured the words of S.J. Perelman, the music of Vernon Duke, and the presence of Beatrice Lillie. Mr. Aronson has just been in East Germany for an International Theater Institute conference on musicals and opera-He recently completed his first set for the Metropolitan Opera—"Fidelio," which Leonard Bernstein will conduct in December. While in Germany, he was shown various other "Pidelio" designs.

" Fidelio is usually based on Piranesi with a fantastic number of stones, or it's done in contemporary style, as a concentration camp. I said 'Fidelio' is about freedom not stoues. The moment you bave that approach, it's completely differcut."

Opera is pretty ridiculous, says Mr. Aronson-"I have never understood the plot of 'Il Trovatore' "-and is just a means of hearing beautiful music. This is because opera is done in an old-fushioned, ineffective way.

"The presentation is dated but in form opera is completely modern because it's absolutely unnaturalistic. It's mixed

"People die and keep singing. You have a solo and then 300 people appear from all over the place. In opera there are more hats, more shoes, more buttons, more swords. . . . It clutters.

"How about approaching the so-called great operas in a contemporary way? By contemporary I mean the difference between Breughel and Picasso. In Picasso you see the simplification of the thing, not the detail."

Mr. Aronson, who is writing a long book about his work and ideas, was the aubject of a 1928 French monograph based on his work in the Bronx.

"I have lived in Paris several times." he says. "Now I find that certain parts are like Plorida. The modernism is so out of keeping, the vulgarity, the lack of proportion and scale, is unbelievable." In Paris, he enjoyed most the wondrous production from Rome of 'Orlando Furioso" that has attracted so much interest from theater people, and the big Matisse exhibition at the Grand Palais. 'The simplicity, the lightness, especially today when so much is bluff and superficial. This kills me about the French: a church Matisse made could have been used by Helena Rubinstein, it's so light, so lovely, so charming." After almost half a century in the theater, Boris Aronson thinks the traditional theater is finished. "Life today is more theatrical than the theater. There are happenings all over, and costumes people wear! I find life so fantastically grotesque and so exciting. You can't top it!"

PEOPLE:

Bursting with good will, French film atar Alain Delon prepared to leave for a four-day trip to the United States. Lucky it's only four days, he said in an interview in Paris's France-Soir, "because even if America has some fascinating aspects, the average American makes me sick." He was quoted as saying the average American "is worse all by himself than the average Frenchman and the average German put together." Delon will personally present prints of his film "Borsalino" to distributors in Los Angeles, then continue to Tokyo for television filming. He was not quoted on his views about Japanese,

The day when actresses hushed up their ages has apparently passed. Evelyn Laye, blonde beauty of Max Reinhardt's "Helen" and heroine of Noel Coward's operetta about old Vienna, "Bitter Sweet" (under Ziegfeld auspices), in New York, celebrated her 70th birthday yesterday at a luncheon attended by 170 of the British theatrical elite at the Savoy Hotel.

Laurence Ollvier, serving as chairman, read a tribute from Noel Coward and messages to Boo" from the Queen Mother, Maurice Chevalier and others. The ceremonies were broadcast over television and recorded for the newsreels. At the end of the festivities Miss Laya sang the nostalgic Coward number "Til See You Again."

VERA RALSTON (Cont'd)-From Laurence Citrin in Barcelons comes further word on the burning question of our times, "Where is Vera Hruba Ralstene" Writes Mr. Citrin: "I wish in the public interest to lay the concern to rest for I can now supply the information required. The great star of yesteryear changed her name and fortune through marriage to one Herbert J. Yates, known as the daddy of the Westerns. She now resides in Santa Barbara with mama and brother Rudy Raiston, who tried unsuccessfully to produce pictures at Republic studios. However, Herbert J. passed away several years ago. and the estate was all left to Vera." Any concern still unlaid

GERIATRICS: Tan Ah Tiat. 49, appeared in court in Kuala Lumpur on an opium possession charge and told the judge the reason he didn't have a job was that he is too old to work. Asked how he lived. Tan replied he lived on the earnings of his grandmother. He was sentenced to four months in jail.

CONGRATULATIONS: Leonard Swartz, 11, of Oshawa, Ontario, who atuifed 173 articles into a half-inch by onc-and-ahalf-inch paper box to win the title of the world champion hoarder. The title was previously held by Shirley Kempster, of England, who crammed 208 articles into a matchbox muc'. larger than Leonard's paper box. Among Leonard's articles were a dead worm, a grasshopper's leg, a bee's wing, an appie seed, a paper-clip, an orange peel, a postage stamp and a piece of chalk.

Brit'sh actor Sean Connerywho won screen fame as sccret agent James Bond—will play a criminal mastermind in a new film called "The Anderson Tapes," Columbia pictures announced yesterday. Based on a best-selling novel by Lawrence Sanders, the film is about a million-dollar robbery in a luxury apartment on New York's Upper East Side. Shooting is scheduled to begin in New York late next month.
